<td>Invited Guest: Philip D. Lumb</td>
<td>Phillip Lumb chair of the Hospital Systems Improvement Collaboration (HSIC) [https://hsic.usc.edu/], described the goals of the group. Alex Capron and Najmedi Meshkati are the leaders who organized the original collaboration. The mission of the HSIC is to promote health system quality improvement in an interdisciplinary manner. The goal is to connect individuals within the university and health system in order to create multidisciplinary teams. These teams will be charged with ground breaking research and developing high quality, sustainable innovations for the 21st century health system. The collaboration is in a nascent state. They have held four lectures thus far, and are currently exploring the cultural aspects of quality improvement by examining the move from the old County hospital to the new site; specifically the behavior and day-to-day interactions between professionals. They are analyzing the current university culture from micro/macro levels, and via many perspectives including ergonomics, public policy and planning, architecture, social sciences, etc. The collaboration is currently looking to embed graduate students into health system improvement projects across the campus. They are also interested in collaborating with other interdisciplinary groups.</td>

Members of the IPE Committee shared the background of the committee and some of the challenges; i.e. need for funding and an IPE Center.

It was noted that the goals of the IPE Committee are specific in that they seek to coordinate educational opportunities for over 800 undergraduate students. This is tangential to the goals of the HSIC, which is looking to connect groups at a more advanced professional level.

Nevertheless, as both groups are looking to connect the campus in an interdisciplinary manner it was agreed that there is benefit to maintaining communication between the two groups.

Amy Chatfield to add Dr. Lumb to IPE email list: Lumb@med.usc.edu

Dr. Lumb will attend IPE meetings as representative for HSIC.

At the next IPE Committee meeting, a member will be designated as representative to attend HSIC meetings at the next IPE meeting.

Filmology: NML Medical Movie Nights

Karin Saric, Information Services Librarian, Norris Medical Library discussed Filmology – NML Medical Movie Nights. This is a Norris Medical Library initiative launched in 2014 to provide an environment for multidisciplinary discussion of health care topics across the USC Health Science Campus community.

The library sponsors free movie screenings twice a year, and brings in relevant, authoritative moderators to host the post film discussion. The current framework consists of screening a blockbuster film in the fall covering a high profile healthcare topic, and a documentary in the spring that addresses an underserved issue.
The library would like the IPE Committee to recommend panel moderators in order to feature an IPE panel at each fall screening going forward.

The next screening is tentatively scheduled for Thursday, Oct. 8, 2015. Film: The Fault in Our Stars.

Committee members recommended the following individuals for the post-film discussion panel:

K. Saric will reach out to recommended individuals.
