Can’t watch the “How do I find a specific book or journal” video? Read this instead!

Start at the Norris Medical Library homepage, http://nml.usc.edu.

Look for the green search boxes at the top of the page and click Library Catalog. This will open a search box on the right-hand side to let you search the Catalog, a list of all the items owned by Norris Medical Library.

In the search box, you can type any information about the book or journal you wish to find: title, author, subject, etc.

I am going to type AHFS Drug Information as I wish to read this book. After typing, click search.

Below is a portion of the results. Any record with the words [electronic resource] indicates that this is an e-book or e-journal, and are available for preceptors to use from their worksites.

Record #2 shows AHFS Drug Information as an e-book; record #4 shows that we also own AHFS DI Essentials as an e-book. This is a condensed version of the entire AHFS DI book. Both are appropriate for pharmacy practice.

Once you’ve determined which book or journal you want to use, click the title to see the full record:
Click the web address link to get to this page:

AHFS Drug Information 2016

For USC users only. Requires USC network connection. Allows limited number of simultaneous connections.

Access this resource

And click on the name of the book one more time.

You will be asked to log in with your USC NetID and password to access this book.

If you have problems finding a specific book, you can always contact the Norris Medical Library’s reference service: medlib@usc.edu, 323-442-1116.